

Welcome to the Team, Mike Way!

Please join me in welcoming our new Director of Safety, Mike Way!

Mike will be overseeing safety processes and procedures for all Miller locations and helping ensure that we provide you with the safest work environment possible.

Mike comes to us with over three decades of experience and has a proven track record of implementing sustainable organizational change and fostering a culture of safety in his previous roles.

Mike has traveled all over the country, serving the safety needs of heavy industrial environments ranging from construction and manufacturing to food processing facilities and industrial printshops.

Mike was a volunteer firefighter and EMT in the early days, which has given him the ability to remain calm in chaotic situations and think on his feet to make quick decisions.

Mike was a journeyman industrial electrician, eventually certifying as a trainer in electrical work, then moved on to electrical safety, construction safety and incident investigations. "Safety Mike" was born when he accepted his first safety manager role in 1998.

Mike & his wife are brand new empty nesters and will celebrate their 27th wedding anniversary in March. The two live in Chattanooga with 2 spoiled dogs and an oddly friendly cat.

Mike's interests and hobbies include tinkering with and driving his old school Porsche, 3D printing, learning how to master his new laser etching machine, and anything related to Star Wars, Marvel, and football. He is a huge UT football fan. He is a lover of live music and has seen artists ranging from Lynyrd Skynyrd, Pink and GWAR... and that was just last year! In the summer he loves to kayak, fish, and travel. He collects rare bourbons and enjoys a good old fashioned with a great steak!

We are excited to have Mike joining our team and look forward to his contributions. He will be making his way around and visiting all the sites, so if you see him, be sure to say hello!

Welcome to the team, Mike!
